The Best in Music For Younger Viewers

LOUIS APPLEBAUM hosts monthly symphony series on "Junior Magazine"

FOR the first time on CBC-TV young viewers will be offered a major series of hour-long music telecasts featuring a symphony orchestra with many young professional musicians in its ranks, youthful guest artists of high calibre, and music old and new that is fun to listen to.

The six-part series will be seen on Junior Magazine Sunday afternoons beginning October 23 (Saturdays on CBWT, beginning October 29). The other concerts will be presented on December 4, January 22, February 26, March 26 and April 23 (six days later in each case on CBWT).

Louis Applebaum, well-known Canadian conductor and newly-appointed TV consultant to the CBC national music department, will be host. Applebaum is just back from New York, where he conducted the off-Broadway premiere of Tyronne Guthrie's production of H.M.S. Pinafore, which he also conducted in its run at the Stratford Festival.

This Week's Guests

Mario Bernardi will direct the orchestra in the first show, which will feature a CBC youth choir recruited especially for this show from grades nine to 12 in high schools in and around Toronto, and trained by Elmer Iseler. Guest artists will be Pierre Come, classical guitarist, of Montreal, and the brilliant young Canadian pianist Ronald Turini, a prize-winner in the Geneva Competition and a 1960 winner of the highly competitive Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Competition.

Turini says he first became interested in music at the age of three, when he received a record-player as a gift and tried to pick out the tunes he liked best on the piano. He had an artistic heritage to start with: his Danish-born mother plays the piano and gave him his first music lessons; his father is a commercial artist, and his grandfather, Giovanni Turini, is an Italian sculptor whose Garibaldi monument stands in New York's Washington Square. At 16 Ronald Turini graduated with distinction from the Quebec Provincial Conservatory. He continued his studies in New York, where the distinguished pianist Vladimir Horowitz was so impressed with his talent that he accepted him as his only pupil. At 26 he is a seasoned performer, having appeared numerous times with the Montreal Symphony, the Orchestre Nationale de Belgique, and other well-known orchestras, and he has toured this country twice with the Jeunesses Musicales du Canada. He has many interests apart from music—he's a keen sportsman and likes to tinker with engines. In his Sunday appearance he will play a group of solos and will join the orchestra for a performance of the finale from the Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat major by Liszt.

Pierre Come studied the violin for 10 years in France, then, at 17, switched to the guitar "so I wouldn't need a pianist following me around." A Spanish guitarist helped him improve his technique, and he did a lot of radio and television work in Marseilles. Three years ago he came to Canada, where he was discovered in Montreal by CBC talent scouts. He will play a group of classical guitar solos.

A highlight of the first concert will be the premiere of The Dance, a specially-commissioned work for choir and orchestra by Godfrey Ridout. The orchestra will play the sixth movement of the suite

"PEOPLE say 'Galbraith' when they want a short word for the fallacies of the prevailing theories of competitive capitalism, in much the same way they use 'Freud' as a sort of common noun for the hypocrisies of Sunday School morality."

The quotation, from an article by Caroline Bird in Esquire, refers of course to a giant (6' 8") Canadian-born economist, John Kenneth Galbraith, an academic who is also said to be principal economic advisor to the Democratic presidential candidate, John Kennedy.

Although written by an economist as contributions to economic theory, Galbraith's books have been widely read: his The Affluent Society has sold 100,000 copies. In his first major work, American Capitalism: The Concept of Countervailing Power, Galbraith argued that bigness was now a fact of American economic life. As Esquire summarizes it: "Corporate power generates unions to beat up the price of labour on one side, and chain stores to beat down prices on the other." These gigantic forces, solidified into power blocs, operate to upset the classical economic "laws" of supply and demand. The only possible role for government is to grow equally big and balance these blocs in the general interests of the country.

Galbraith thus antagonized the conservatives who saw the growth of government as an evil to be curbed. This is not desirable, says Galbraith. And he antagonized those liberals who wanted to break the corporations and unions as centres of power. This was not possible, he says. Big government was the only solution.

The Affluent Society offered more economic heresies. Briefly, the United States has solved the basic problems of production in that the vast majority of the population is now well clothed and well fed. Some poor remain, but greater production of consumer goods will not help them, as we already have a surplus.

The absurdity of this situation is shown by the fact that high-powered advertising, creating artificial needs, is necessary to stimulate further economic growth: longer tailfins and shinier washing machines serve no function other than economic growth for its own sake.

Trouble is, argues Galbraith, this sort of economic growth — higher consumer productivity — is bought at the expense of the public welfare. What the Americans should do is divert this 'surplus' private consumer spending into public expenditure on schools, playgrounds, mental hospitals, police — all of those things which are simply not the concern of private enterprise.

This will allow government to grow too big? So what! he says. This is not, in itself, to be feared.

Criticism of Galbraith's thesis have ranged from those whose distrust of big government remains, to those who, like C. A. R. Crosland of the British Labour party, accept with Galbraith that we should give "a higher priority to non-economic rather than economic values, whenever the two conflict," but disagree with steps in Galbraith's argument.

Crosland, for instance, does not agree that to achieve this we must "run the economy at half-cock," or that, as Galbraith maintains, the price of full employment is creeping inflation. But whether Crosland is right or wrong in these criticisms, he is really accepting Galbraith's ethics, and rejecting his economics.

Andrew Shonfield in the Observer attacks Galbraith's "implausible assumption" that a simple transfer

WAYNE AND SHUSTER RETURN

Author of Johnny Wayne's and Frank Shuster's famous early Roman sketches has been lined up for the first of the season's Wayne and Shuster specials this Tuesday night on CBC-TV. This time Flavius Maximus, private Roman eye (Wayne) is called in by Ben Hur (Shuster) to solve a big chariot race "fix." On the same program a PTA meeting is called to discuss the influence of TV westerns on school children, and Professor Waynegartner, appointed chief coach of Canada's 1964 Olympic team, shows TV interviewer Frank Shuster how things are shaping up.

Also on the Wayne and Shuster Show this Tuesday—Don Gillies and his dancers, who will take viewers on a trip to the fair; and vocalist Terry Dale, who was regular vocalist with Johnny and Frank on their radio show, who will sing In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening in a Hallowe'en setting.

of labour will solve such problems as the shortage of teachers, and, in another context, Robert Fulford of the Toronto Star suggests that prevailing conditions, particularly attitudes of mind, may not be favourable to greater government spending.

In the Sunday Times, George Schwartz attacks the notion that all this is new (as Galbraith iconoclastically, asserts). Schwartz quotes: "A state cannot have more wealth at its command than may be employed for its general good, a liberal expenditure in national works being one of the surest means of promoting national prosperity. . . ." That was written by Southey, 130 years ago!

John Kenneth Galbraith was born in 1908 in Iona Station, Ont., "to a Baptist Scotch family congenitally ag'in drink, spending, royalty and the Tories who ran Canada," says Esquire. After studying at the University of Toronto, he went to the University of California, won a Ph.D. with a thesis "proving that the best size for a California county is neither too big nor too small," and then went into the expanding career of egghead advisor to the politically and economically great—a sort of Aristotle, to America's Alexanders; first the crepe-paper King, Henry Dennison, and then various government departments in the Roosevelt Administration. A spell on the staff of Fortune Magazine from 1942 to 1947 was followed by his re-entry into the academic world in the economics department at Harvard.

Whether Galbraith's theories are correct or not, whether new or not, they are likely to remain influential for many years.

Colour TV In Canada

IN a recent statement on colour television, J. A. Ouimet, president of the CBC, said: "The CBC has been keeping in close touch with all aspects of colour TV developments in the United States in order to be prepared to develop a Canadian service when the proper time arrives. The Corporation's engineers are keeping abreast of the latest technical developments. The CBC and the communications companies have worked closely together since the inception of the microwave network on preparations for distributing Canadian and U.S. programs to more than 50 affiliated stations of the national television service.

"In considering the appropriate time for introducing colour to its TV networks, the CBC must keep in mind the fact that until very recently the progress in the U.S. has been disappointingly slow. However, the conversion to colour by many U.S. TV stations plus increased interest and activity in the receiver manufacturing industry suggests that there are more reasons for optimism than have been apparent for some time. There may not be any fast growth, but it seems likely that there will be a fairly steady development of the industry over the next few years. As receiver sales increase, manufacturing costs will drop and this should give added impetus to sales.

"In considering the possibilities of colour, the Corporation must keep in mind that the point of significant colour acceptance by the U.S. public has not yet arrived, although this was expected some years ago. This is undoubtedly due, in part, to the price of colour receivers. Prices in Canada will certainly not be any lower, and in addition, it seems obvious that Canadians today would hesitate before purchasing colour receivers for the same reasons that make the American public cautious. These reasons are still somewhat of an enigma to the industry. Whatever

Today—"Disaster Below." The U.S. Coast Guard hires Andrews to head salvage operations after a tidal wave causes 82 vessels to be sunk in Los Angeles harbour. A businessman tries to circumvent the salvage work on a priority basis by having a ten-age girl make a dive for him.

Red River Jamboree

• I wish to commend those responsible for the introduction of a new personality to the screen in the last two Red River Jamboree shows. I refer to Miriam Breitman, who has a very fine voice capable of rendering a wide repertoire, as well as a warm and extremely pleasant personality. I hope that we will have the opportunity of seeing much more of her on CBC-TV.—Y. S. B., Ph.D., Montreal.

• I was asked to drop you a line to remind you that the so-called "old time" dancing that your people do is a disgrace to us old timers out here. If that's what you're going to call it, let's have some real old time dancing.—E. S., North Surrey, B.C.

Robert Herridge Theatre

• I wish to express my heartfelt appreciation to you for presenting The Sound of Miles Davis on the Robert Herridge Theatre series. It is certainly a relief to see a program featuring the jazz artistry of one man instead of a conglomeration of musicians playing a multitude of styles loosely held together by the inane chatter of some badly informed "personality." This program also avoided the oppressive noise most television producer seem to understand as a "jam session." I realize that much of the credit for this amazingly intelligent presentation must go to Mr. Herridge and his very able advisor Nat Hentoff, but I wish to thank the CBC once again for presenting it. Please, more of the same! — A. C., Winnipeg.

• In the last month you have offered two of the finest musical experiences I can recall having seen on television—The Sound of Miles Davis on "Robert Herridge Theatre," and the remarkable film on Bruno Walter. During the Davis performance I sat entranced. It ranged from uniquely beautiful to fiercely exciting, and all the while maintaining the "relaxed tension" ingredient which is both peculiar and essential to good jazz. A repeat would surely be in order at the end of this series. The Robert Herridge Theatre series as a whole is completely refreshing and a pleasant departure from most TV fare.—R.G.D., Edmonton.

English CBWFT Viewer

• I would like to thank you for the very excellent film on India, presented last Saturday evening on CBWFT. This type of program should advance the cause of the French language in western Canada, since it attracts many non-French-speaking people strongly enough to make us want to review our high school French. As you know, learning to understand a language is much more difficult than learning to speak it (at least at an elementary level!) Films such as these are a major help in this regard.—M. B., Winnipeg.

TV Sports

• I certainly agree with Mrs. G. R. S. It has been a shame to remove Great Movies to put on football. I know we must have missed some very good entertainment and I was doubly disappointed this Saturday to have the whole evening taken up with hockey and football. I think more consideration should be given to the many, and not the few. I sincerely hope this is not going to be a steady diet of viewing for Saturday nights.—Mrs. E. M. B., Tofield, Alta.

• With the approach of the hockey season I would like to put forward a plea for television coverage of a complete NHL game each Saturday. Since TV sports programs are confined largely to hockey during the winter this would not seem to be an unreasonable request. A realistic estimate of the proportion of the population watching sports events on TV would be one out of two or three, certainly not one out of 50 or 75, as suggested by previous correspondents. The CBC has earned the gratitude of followers of sports with its policy of televising top-flight athletic events. But for these telecasts countless thousands, particularly in western Canada, would never see NHL Hockey, a major league baseball game, or a Grey Cup final.—D. G., Regina.

Town Above

• What happened to The Town Above? We haven't had an easy wink of sleep since Denis left Louise and the Philosopher adrift on the St. Lawrence. Hair of a dog!—if that show doesn't come back on CBWT soon we'll have to write our own finale. You can't leave us in the lurch like that ! ! ! !—(nine signatures), Supervisor's Department, Bank of ———, Winnipeg.

• . . . By the way, what happened to The Town Above? Louise and the Philosopher must have gone on one long honeymoon! One girl I was talking to said she cried when it went off the air. That was a heart-warming story. I hope that some day soon they

as she appeared in Winnipeg's Rainbow Stage production of "Damn Yankees." Miss Stuart is one of the guest stars on "The World of Music" Sunday night on CBC-TV.

a livestock surplus? How will it affect the North American economy? Ken Homer of Woodstock, N.B., interviews Harry Hargraves, chief of the agricultural division, Farm Rehabilitation Administration; Ralph Bennett, chief of livestock merchandizing, Canada Department of Agriculture; Jake Brown, farm management specialist, Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture; as well as farmers, ranchers and feedlot operators.

The Twentieth Century

Four Cities

The last program of the series, originally scheduled for Oct. 16, will be seen today and features the city of Edinburgh. Is Scotland's chief export still its brightest progeny? What is being done to make the land of the heather and the hills fit to live in? Do the old feuds between the clans still survive? These are among the questions posed in this week's program. These questions are investigated through six characters—a farmer in the southern highlands, a Glasgow shipyard worker, a young engineer, a fashion model at a famous knitwear firm, and a minister of the Church of Scotland. (Series produced by Ron Kelly and Peter Broderick on a commission from the United Kingdom Information Service.)

Walt Disney Presents

This week—"All About Magic." Disney provides a look at various aspects of legerdemain, with the aid of a "slave" in a magic mirror. The mirror shows scenes from the lives of Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, in episodes in which magic plays a part.

National Velvet

Serial about a 12-year-old girl and her love for a horse, starring Lori Martin as Velvet Brown. The story is based on Enid Bagnold's novel and the MGM movie of the same title but the locale has been moved from England to an American dairy farm region. Arthur Space and Ann Doran play Velvet's parents, Carol Wells portrays her boy-crazy older sister and Joey Scott plays young Donald Brown.

This week—"The Drought." Velvet agrees to sell her horse, King, to finance a new well when a drought hits her parents' farm. Mr. Brown had previously decided to sell his dairy cattle to a meat packer because of lack of water for the herd.

World of Music

With host Wally Koster. A series devoted to classical, popular, sacred and ethnic music. Each program will introduce artists who have never before been featured on network television.

This week's guests are musical comedy star Joan Stuart, Winnipeg vocalist Shirley Shaw, and comedian-singer Doug Chamberlain. Joan Stuart has appeared in the Canadian revues "My Fur Lady" and "Spring Thaw." On tonight's program she will sing "A Little Brains, a Little Talent" from "Damn Yankees," the show in which she starred this summer at Winnipeg's Rainbow Stage. Shirley Shaw, a TCA stewardess, will sing the popular ballad "Close Your Eyes," and Doug Chamberlain, also a veteran of "My Fur Lady" and "Spring Thaw," will do a monologue and several sketches.

Ed Sullivan Show

Ed's guests this week include Gordon and Sheila MacRae, the singing Crosby brothers (Philip, Lindsay and Dennis), comedian Jack Carter, singer Eileen Farrell, jazz pianist Errol Garner, and the Five Williams (jugglers).

G.M. Presents

This week—"Death Is a Spanish Dancer," an original teleplay by Wendell Mayes, produced by Ronald Weyman and starring Diana Vandervlis. Miss Vandervlis plays the role of Mina Ketterling, protected and ailing only daughter of a Montreal millionaire. She begins frequenting a shabby nightclub by herself, fascinated by Que Que, a mysterious Mexican gypsy dancer. When her father intervenes she follows the dancer to Mexico, although she and Que Que have never exchanged a word.

national League for Peace and Freedom. Inspired by the suggestion of a speaker at a UNESCO conference that artists of the world exchange their work, Mrs. Maude Muller, the present chairman, conceived the idea of an exchange of pictures by children, about children, between children. A special showing of the pictures from children around the world has been made available to Open House.

Instruments are merely extensions of man's senses and can never be used as substitutes for man himself.

Man has a natural curiosity and machines don't. Machines are designed to undertake one specific task; they cannot pick out the unusual, the unexpected thing which they were never designed to measure; nor can they mend themselves nor improve themselves, nor adapt themselves, Man for all his failings, can do these things.—J. L. Carter, Secretary of the British Interplanetary Society, on BBC.

There is a new animal on Mr. Whiffletree's animal farm—an elephant named Ruby May. Maggie, Fitzgerald and Reuben decide to pay her a visit. When they get to the farm they can't see the elephant—only a large, grey mound which they think is a rock. Fitz and Reuben climb up on the "rock" and are thrown off. They all think there is an earthquake. But they soon realize their mistake and make friends with Ruby May.

CBWT—Eye to Eye

This week—a discussion between Frederick G. Gardiner, chairman of Toronto's metro council, and R. G. H. Bonnycastle, chairman of Winnipeg's. They will talk about the differences in the metro set-up in the two cities and about the future of metro government. The program will also touch on aspects of the civic election of the following day.

"CLOSE-UP U.S.A."

THE UNITED STATES, perhaps more than any other nation, exhibits a great range of racial and regional differences, a great variety of often contradictory trends, attitudes and opinions among its citizens. This gives American society its fascination for students of the social sciences, and it gives American politics its predictive hazards for prophets and pundits.

This Tuesday, on the eve of the American presidential election, Close-Up takes a special look at some of these differences as they are embodied in seven very famous Americans.

George Gallup discusses with Robert Hoyt his public opinion polls and their efficiency, accuracy and social value. Gallup got the idea for such polls while conducting surveys of newspaper readership. His methods have been attacked, both on statistical grounds, and also on the ethical grounds that they are subverting normal democratic procedures, and, by publishing pre-election trends, in fact influence those trends. The Gallup polls have had successes—Dr. Gallup successfully predicted Roosevelt's re-elections—and also their failures, as with the 1948 Truman victory.

Mike Wallace, famed as an American TV interviewer, comments on his own pre-election survey of public opinion, and from this, makes some predictions. After a solid but not spectacular success on radio and TV as commentator and panelist, Wallace began a late-night interview show called Night Beat on a New York station. In his first show he interviewed New York's Mayor Wagner, tossing at him questions taken from a highly critical New York paper's editorial. The success of this and later plunges into controversy led to a similar show, The Mike Wallace Interview on ABC. On this show he scored high marks from critics for his attempts to open on air such TV-taboo subjects as politics, religion and morality; but was also heavily criticized for alleged ruthlessness and sensational questions.

Arthur Miller, interviewed in Ireland by Malcolm Muggeridge, discusses what he, as a writer, feels about America, in particular, some of the values and characteristics of the American people and the likely direction of evolution of American society. Miller, husband of actress Marilyn Monroe, is the controversial author of many socially critical plays: Death of a Salesman and The Crucible, for instance. In 1957, the Senate house committee on un-American affairs questioned him about alleged communist activities and indicted him for contempt when he refused to answer some questions. After trial and conviction in a lower court, the Supreme Court quashed both conviction and indictment. "Not until much later did I realize the government had never intended to punish me personally," Miller claims. "My trial was a warning to other writers to avoid social or economic themes."

Henry Luce, head of Time Inc. which publishes Time magazine (6½ million readers), Life and Fortune, tells Barry Harris his

Of all the members of a London Club (circa 1903) only Formalyn knows the dread secret of the fat Mr. Pyecraft. Formalyn knows it because it was he who gave Pyecraft the nauseating Hindu recipe to

First Person

"Something Special In Half-Hour Dramas"

TWO KINDS of play best fit the 30-minute format on TV. One is the story that creates suspense through action. The other explores a single situation involving two people.

"In neither type of play on TV can you stop to reminisce or philosophize as you can on radio," argues Raymond Whitehouse, a veteran radio drama producer, and now executive producer of CBC-TV's First Person series.

Finding an ending is the toughest part of writing a 30-minute script, suggests Whitehouse. "The viewer must feel at the end that he has seen something completed, something accomplished," he says. "When you find this in a script it lights up on your desk like a neon sign."

Whitehouse sees no solution to the "script problem." In the first place, simply offering more money will not result in a wave of good scripts. The money offered by CBC induce loss of weight—with unpredictable results.

Perry Como Show

Perry's guests this week — singer-actress Jane Powell, singer Andy Williams, and comedian Thelma Ritter.

Explorations

This week — "The Hero at Home," the last of three programs satirizing heroes of the electronic age. A real father (Don Francks) intrudes on a television set to speak his mind to a TV father (Austin Willis), the star of a family situation comedy. From Toronto.

Rocket Richard

This program is a testimonial to Maurice "Rocket" Richard, star of Montreal Canadiens hockey team, who retired this year from active participation in the sport.

for the half hour drama is good now, and this, combined with the simple fact that his play will be produced and seen across Canada, would be sufficient stimulus for the able young playwright.

Secondly, Whitehouse believes the script problem will always be with us because producers will always seek more and better plays. Finally, in another sense, there is no script problem: "If we put on a play that is bad," he says, "the fault is ours for selecting it. This so-called lack of good scripts can too easily turn into just an excuse."

Whitehouse holds strong views on the subject, and he expresses them forthrightly. On the limitations of the subjective treatment, used in First Person productions (and giving the series its name) he says, "There's not much dramatic value in exploring the mind of some dumb Joe going to the supermarket like you and me. So you tend to look for characters with a problem, and pretty soon you wind up in the psychiatric ward."

To offset this tendency, Whitehouse is seeking plays with a strong story line. This week, for instance, Eric Till is producing H. G. Wells's story, The Truth About Pyecraft, a hilarious comedy in which much of the action takes place on the ceiling of Pyecraft's London flat.

The First Person technique also, of course, has its advantages. "In the first place you can legitimately condense action," says Whitehouse. "Events occurring over a period of years can be shown in 30 minutes. Secondly, it offers a way of involving the viewer in the action, of creating a sense of intimacy suitable to the television medium. Thirdly, it lets the camera become an actor, a device which should be used sparingly, but can be most effective. Finally, it offers a loose and highly flexible format which can be used indefinitely."

The Whitehouse idea of a good script seems to have stamped itself on the series. Toronto Star critic Dennis Braithwaite recently said of the series, "First Person, under Raymond Whitehouse, is beginning to look like something special in half hour dramas."

writes and reads the stories on "Just Mary" Thursday afternoons on CBC-TV.

reads a story — "The Fierce Yellow Pumpkin."

Music In Miniature

A half-hour of serious music produced in Toronto. The series presents well-known and less familiar short pieces for voices or instruments. Three or four younger and lesser-known recitalists will be featured on each program.

Just Mary

Stories by Mary Grannan. This week—"The Chinese Bracelet." Sandra Lee Simpkins has a Chinese bracelet with a riddle on it. Only the person who solves the riddle can rescue Prince Ling from the clutches of the dragon, Riddle-dee-dee, and restore him to his love, Princess Ming. Sara Lee solves the riddle and starts on her journey over the rainbow to rescue Prince Ling.

Junior Roundup

With host Murray Westgate. Today—"Hue and Cry," an English film about a group of boys who chase a gang of crooks.

Live a Borrowed Life

Max Ferguson, radio's old Rawhide and host of "Open House," and TV interviewer Mary Helen McPhillips join regular panelists Elwy Yost and Bill Walker. Charles Templeton is moderator.

will return from their honeymoon and get their feet on solid earth again and visit us all once a week. It sure would make life interesting and help wear the winter away. Hair of a dog, let's go!—Mrs. C. P., Kenora, Ont.

Although "The Town Above" is not among this season's programs on the English network, it will be seen on the French network (CBWFT, Winnipeg) Thursday nights, starting October 12. (The French title is "En haut de la pente douce.")

Close-Up

• After seeing June Callwood do such a fine job of showing the personality behind the mask of Red Skelton, this viewer would love to see her spend an hour with the greatest of all comedians, Charlie Chaplin. This artist is still alive, although Hollywood has tried to bury him for his non-conformity, I consider Close-Up

Fancy Free

With Allan Blye, Ruth Walker, the Billy Van Four, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, and host Alan Millar.

This week's guests are the Canadettes, 12 precision dancers from the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand show. The "Calendar Year" portion of the program will cover the period from 1900* to 1905. Some of the songs from this period to be heard are "Tell Me Pretty Maiden" (Billy Van Four), "In th Good Old Summer-time" (Allan Blye), "I Don't Care" (Ruth Walker) and "Won't You Come Home Bill Bailey?" (entire cast).

Tennessee Ernie Ford

With singer-comedian Ernie Ford, the Top Twenty singing group and special guests.

Ernie's guest is Cliff (Charley Weaver) Arquette. Ernie and the Top Twenty will sing a medley of football songs.

the best TV fare in North America.—P. A., Claresholm, Alta.

"Four Cities"

• Your recent television portrayal of Belfast did not do justice to a very beautiful city. I would suggest that whoever described this show as a travelogue of Belfast has never been to the city, and further that you pay his fare for a re-track that would open his eyes. People who have never seen Belfast (i.e. Winnipeg TV viewers) must think my fair city is Land's End.—(unsigned), Winnipeg.

"Four Cities" is a British film series, commissioned by the United Kingdom Information Service, which describes the film on Belfast not as a "travelogue," but as "a program primarily about people: their lives, their loves, their personal tragedies, and their joys."

Stratford "Pinafore"

• We have no opera house in this part of Saskatchewan, but now I know what an opera looks like, thanks to CBC-TV and the Stratford players. We thought H.M.S. Pinafore was wonderful, pleasing to both the eye and the ear.—I.A., Briarlea, Sask.

• I would like to express my appreciation of the wonderful production of H.M.S. Pinafore on CBC-TV last evening. It was most thrilling, and I am sure that I couldn't have enjoyed it more if I had been in the theatre. The Stratford players were superb, and great credit is due to both Tyrone Guthrie and the CBC's producer, Norman Campbell.—Mrs. O. P., Pilot Mound, Man.

• I have just watched a very enjoyable performance of H.M.S. Pinafore. I sincerely hope that you will have more of these productions. Keep up the good work!—G. I., Winnipeg.

• . . . I'm quite certain that the percentage of the general population that enjoys this sort of thing is very small indeed. It's tragic that the CBC has to be used to keep such second-rate shows from being tossed into the garbage.—R. K. S., Gimli, Man.

In an October 16 CBC-TV production, a drama entitled Hide Me in the Mountains, George Luscombe plays a simple 24-year-old. In another program, an Explorations satire on westerns, he is cast as a 58-year-old professor.

MUSIC ON RADIO

THIRTY-FIVE conductors and guest artists of top international stature will be featured with three leading Canadian symphony orchestras beginning new broadcast seasons on CBC radio. This Sunday night the Montreal Symphony Orchestra starts a weekly series in which it will alternate, as in previous years, with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. The CBC Symphony will again be heard Friday nights.

Dr. Geoffrey Waddington, CBC director of music, will conduct the first two concerts by the CBC Symphony. The opening program will be a salute to Dr. Healey Willan, the grand old man of Canadian composers, who has just celebrated his 80th birthday. The orchestra will play two Willan compositions that have become very popular in the concert repertoire: Coronation March, and Symphony No. 2.

Efrem Kurtz, recording conductor for Electrical, Music Industries,

My Russian Journey

Starting this Monday, the daily reading on Trans-Canada Matinee will be from My Russian Journey by Santha Ramu Rau.

Miss Rama Rau was born in India and educated in England and the United States. With her American husband and young son, she spent several months travelling in Russia, and her book is an entirely personal account of their journey. Miss Rama Rau is also known for her widely-acclaimed dramatization of E. M. Forster's A Passage to India.

My Russian Journey has been adapted for radio by Sally Creighton and will be read by Ottawa actress Flo Fancott.

Ltd., of England, who so brilliantly conducted the orchestra's cycle of Beethoven symphonies last season, has been invited back for eight occasions. Kurtz and the orchestra have great admiration for each other. "It is not only that the orchestra is made up of so many fine musicians," he says, "but also that their spirit is so good. Canadians should be extremely proud of the orchestra, and should find some way to send it on a tour of the United States and Europe."

"Because Kurtz has a tremendous background of the classics," says Terence Gibbs, assistant to Dr. Waddington, "we feel we should take advantage of his presence here to give the orchestra the benefit of it. So he will be including the four Brahms symphonies in his program. But we have no intention of this being a follow-up to the Beethoven cycle, because Brahms' symphonies don't lend themselves so well to cyclic treatment — they don't illustrate the development of his musical personality as Beethoven's do. Kurtz will also conduct the three symphonies in which Mozart's genius culminated so magnificently, numbers 39, 40 and 41, known as 'the triple crown,' and the Canadian première of Symphony No. 7 by Shostakovich. The balance of his programs will include quite a few contemporary works, including a French-Canadian and an English-Canadian work." Mozart's Symphony No. 40 will also be played by the Montreal Symphony in its opening broadcast on the 23rd.

Appearing with Kurtz as soloist in the December 9 broadcast will be his wife, Elaine Shaffer, one of the few (and one of the best) solo flutists in the world, who made her Canadian debut with the orchestra last year. After her first rehearsal the whole orchestra stood and cheered. This time they are looking forward to joining her in a performance of Two Last Poems for Flute and Orchestra written especially for her by Ernest Bloch.

Later in the season Robert Craft will be a guest conductor in a program featuring pianist Glenn Gould in a performance of the Schoenberg Concerto, which Gould had hoped to play with the orchestra last year, but had to postpone because of a back injury. After the concert the work will be recorded by Columbia Records — the first time the CBC Symphony will have appeared under a big commercial label. Gould will also play the concerto with the Montreal Symphony on December 11. Robert Craft is one of the world's leading authorities on 12-tone and contemporary music in general, and is known in music circles as Stravinsky's right-hand man. Josef Krips, conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic, will direct two concerts in January, and will also appear with the Montreal Symphony on three occasions.

Walter Susskind, permanent conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will be on the podium for all the orchestra's broadcasts, except for the one on January 29 when Pierre Monteux, celebrated 85-year-old French-American conductor, will be a special guest. Among the interesting contemporary works it will present this season are Bluebeard's Castle, an opera in concert form by Bela Bartok, featuring two Canadians, soprano Ilona Kombrink and bass Jan Rubes on March 12; and the Richard Strauss symphonic poem Thus Spake Zarathustra on February 26. Louise Kentner, one of England's top pianists, will appear on October 30 to play the Bloch Concerto Symphonique. Other guests including leading Soviet violinist Leonid Kogan; young American pianist Malcolm Frager, 1959 winner of the Leventritt Award, generally considered the most important of the American musical competitions; Canadian pianist Ida Krehm, whose concert work is as well known in Europe as on this continent; England's great woman pianist Myra Hess; Germany's Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, one of the world's top sopranos; and violinist Isaac Stern.

The Montreal Symphony opens its season Sunday night with a concert conducted by Vladimir Golschmann, Parisian-born conductor of the St. Louis Symphony. Other guest conductors include Zubin Mehta, a Parsee from Bombay; Leopold Ludwig, conductor of the Hamburg (Germany) Opera; Thomas Schippers, conductor of the New York City Opera; Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony; Igor Markevitch, permanent conductor of the Lamoureux Orchestra of Paris; and Werner Torkanowsky.

Soloists appearing with the Montreal Symphony include young French violinist Christian Ferras this Sunday; harpist Marie Iosch, the youngest musician ever to become a member of the Montreal orchestra; Wolfgang Kander, Dutch flutist now living in Montreal; pianist Leon Fleisher, first American to win the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in 1952 at the age of 24; and Jaime Laredo, 18-year-old Bolivian violinist who won the same competition; violinist Isaac Stern; Leontyne Price, American concert and operatic soprano; French pianist Nicole Henriot-Schweitzer who is as well known for her outstanding work as a member of the French Resistance in the Second World War as she is for her piano artistry; Jean Casadesus, French pianist and son of the famous pianist Robert Casadesus, Nell Rankin, youngest leading contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company; and John Browning, young American pianist.

Sunday Radio

"THE CRIMINAL"

A convicted murderer tells his story on PROJECT '61

AN outspoken, moving argument for a cleanup in our social system will be heard Sunday afternoon on CBC radio. The speaker is probably one of the most unusual ever heard on the air: a convicted murderer. Once an unloved, unwanted punk with no family, no future, no friends, no hope, he knows what it is to have lived in the death cell, to have faced the prospect of the gallows alone at 17. Today he is a psychologist, a social worker, a leading man in his profession, happily married, with a family. We will call him John Doe, because he is as much a product of our social system as any of us.

He tells his story simply, vividly, unemotionally, spilling out fact upon fact about orphanage and penitentiary life, about the lonely, bitter struggle of young human flotsam, in two of the most powerful programs CBC radio has ever presented. They are the first of eight hours Project '61 is devoting to a close examination of people who influence our society because of their personal situation or profession.

The first, called The Criminal, is a picture of a hostile, unfeeling society exerting influences on an uncomprehending orphan child, and of his inevitable social rebellion. The second, The Social Worker, is the continuing story of The Criminal, but it is also a picture of our slowly changing social attitudes towards penal reform and how enlightened society can deal realistically with salvageable material.

John Doe is the principal speaker in both programs, he will be interviewed by Sidney Katz, well-known Canadian writer and broadcaster on social and medical topics. Katz wrote an article based on their conversations which appeared in Maclean's magazine in August, but there were many of John Doe's experiences and observations which could not be included. These, plus his first-person account of his life as an orphan, as a dabbler in petty crime and murder, as a lad exploring a new world of the mind with the help of individuals and social agencies, as a university student and as a social worker helping other unfortunates to re-establish themselves on the outside, will be heard on Project '61. Many other voices will be heard, too: convicts, dope addicts, prostitutes, psychiatrists, members of the John Howard Society, university officials, and others who helped or were helped by John Doe. Lloyd Chester had the difficult job of editing three hours of fascinating conversation down to two.

John Doe was an orphan at one. His fondest memories are of the Bradley house, where he lived with foster parents for six years, until he was nine. The ideals this kind couple instilled in the frightened, lonely little boy are, he feels, largely responsible for his being able to reestablish himself in a constructive life. He tells of his bewilderment when Mrs. Bradley died and her husband became an alcoholic. He tells why and how he ran away several times, was in and out of detention homes and orphanages, describes the lessons in petty crime he learned there, the physical and mental tortures he endured from the older boys who ruled their little empires viciously, and of the homosexuality they practiced. Finally he tells of the bicycle theft that landed him in prison. He was 16 when he made a plan to escape. He gives a vivid description of his killing a guard, how he was tried and sentenced to hang, and of his long watch in the death cell. His standard was still "me first and to hell with everybody else." Then his sentence was commuted to life.

He talks a lot about the eternal wars waged between prisoners and guards, the brutalities, the kind-

PROGRAM NOTES

POSTMARK U.K.

"Worth Flower Show." When he heard that a village Flower Show and Fete was to be held at Worth in Surrey, Arthur Bush asked Elspeth Chisholm to report on it—an English occasion through Canadian eyes. Elspeth obtained some interesting interviews with the villagers and saw exhibits in the show; and with Arthur Bush she gives a small picture of village life.

Education Is His Life. Shirley Brett of Vancouver talks with Dr. S. R. Laycock about his latest book, "Mental Hygiene in the School," and about mental health in general. (Rebroadcast from Trans-Canada Matinee of Sept. 21).

Danish Day Nursery. The idea of a day nursery attached to a large, sprawling brewery in Copenhagen struck James McLean, a former Edmontonian now living in London, as rather strange. He investigated, and tells today how it was opened by Queen Ingrid of Denmark 12 years ago, and now has room for a hundred children. (Rebroadcast from TCM, June 13).

Just Wait, Mr. Coyne. Ruth McDonald, an Edmonton housewife and mother of four children, explains how, not enjoying their roles as a couple of unsympathetic old misers, she and her husband coped with the problem of teaching their children how to handle money wisely. (Rebroadcast from TCM, June 20).

LIFE AND LITERATURE

Professor John Bilsland of the Department of English, University of Alberta, presents the second of four talks dealing with some of the fears and doubts of the Victorian era as they emerged in the life and works of prominent literary figures of the period. Today, "James Thomson" — Thomson was the author of one of the most despairing poems of the English language, "The City of Dreadful Night," and in this talk

Professor Bilsland discusses the factors which created Thomson's bleak outlook on life.

The musical heyday of Venice came in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, when the city was losing its political grip, and becoming instead a metropolis of grace and pleasure. The first madrigal was performed in Venice, and the first

Italian opera. Four celebrated conservatoires flourished, and seven active opera houses, and great families even had their private organists. In the great cathedral of St. Mark, where Monteverdi was once choirmaster, six separate orchestras were sometimes assembled, in different parts of the church, for the performance of an oratorio.—John Morris, on BBC.

The real danger of fame is the distortion that it works on the simplest things. It over simplifies, which is the greatest danger of all. There is hardly anything in life that is black or white, or red or gold. There is no human personality that can be summed up in a single word.—Nancy Spain on BBC.

THE CRIMINAL

nesses, the laziness, bitterness and sexual perversion that existed among the men. Next he tells of his 10-year plan to educate himself, how strange the outside world was to him on his release, his four years of night and day work to save money for his master's degree in psychology. And then he tells of his work in helping other criminals to find their feet on the outside.

Soon John Doe will apply to the Supreme Court for a pardon which, if it is granted, will obliterate his whole prison record forever, and formally re-establish him as a first-class Canadian citizen.

Reeves Play To Be Published

Following the first broadcast of A Beach of Strangers, verse play by CBC radio producer John Reeves, last year on CBC Wednesday Night, many listeners requested copies of the script or asked if it was to be published. When the play was rebroadcast four months ago many more similar requests and inquiries were received.

It has recently been announced that the Oxford University Press will be publishing A Beach of Strangers next year. CBC Times will keep readers posted on the date of publication.

A Beach of Strangers won for Mr. Reeves the coveted Italia award for radio drama in 1959. A new work by the Toronto producer will be presented this week on CBC Wednesday Night (see story page 29).

the reasons, colour cannot develop without viewers.

"The introduction of colour into Canada on any basis will unavoidably involve the CBC in large expenditures. This requisite will be further emphasized by the national requirements of Canadian sponsors and receiver manufacturers.

"An equally important responsibility for the CBC, if its service is to be truly national, will be the provision of colour programming for the French network which, unlike its English-language counterpart, would not have access to ready-made U.S. colour programs.

"Although colour TV is expensive, Canadians will expect this service from the CBC when colour starts here. To provide such a service the Corporation will require additional public funds.

"On the present level of financing the CBC does not have the money to go into colour. The corporation has to devote all its resources and energies to the development of black and white television in order to meet the public demand for an extension of national TV service to all parts of Canada.

"The CBC would like to provide a national service in colour when all factors make the time appropriate, not only because of increased enjoyment for the Canadian viewer, but for the sake of the general buoyant effect on the electronics industry and the resulting effect on the Canadian economy."

Autumn Nocturn

JOHN REEVES introduces his own work, to be presented this week on CBC Wednesday Night

SOME readers may be unfamiliar with the ecclesiastical usage of the word "nocturn": it denotes one of the divisions, usually three, of the office of matins. The canonical hour of matins (as distinct from the Anglican morning service) is properly a midnight office, though it is sometimes delayed until day-break and is frequently recited by anticipation during the afternoon or evening. However, in using the word "nocturn" in my title, I mean to suggest the nocturnal connotation: parts of the poem evoke an evening atmosphere; the remainder is a nightscape.

Autumn Nocturn is intended for reading in the ordinary way, privately, or for broadcasting. As a broadcast it would be combined with music, as indicated in the text, so that the listener may be afforded some relief from the sheer quantity of the words, the sort of relief which a reader can enjoy simply by laying the book aside for a while. The music would be partly instrumental and partly vocal. The instrumental music would accompany the speaking of the prologue and the epilogue, would provide brief transitions before each of the nine spoken poems which make up the three main sections of the text, and would conclude each main section in the form of an extended musical movement; the vocal music would be settings for unaccompanied soprano of each of the three lyric poems which announce the three main sections.

The dedication of this poem to Gerard Manley Hopkins is, I believe, apt and will not, I hope, seem impertinent. It is not merely a token of admiration, nor merely a recognition of the debt owed to him by so many modern poets besides myself. Beyond that, it is intended to draw the reader's or the listener's attention to a central aspect of the text, which is that my subject-matter is largely the same as that which chiefly occupied Hopkins, namely Grace, and in certain appropriate passages (the prologue, the epilogue, and the first poem of Part III, which is directly addressed to Hopkins) I have not been ashamed to underline this fact by borrowing freely from his style.

There is not, I think, anything intrinsically obscure in this text which stands in need of explanation. There is, however, one indirect allusion to a historical fact which may not readily leap to mind: This comes in the passage addressed to Hopkins, in which I allude obliquely to his long literary silence. When he became a Jesuit he burnt all his verse and, as he put it, "resolved to write no more, as not belonging to my profession, unless by the wish of my superiors." It is thanks to the wish of his superiors that he began to write again, seven years later, and the whole corpus of work which has made him famous belongs to the subsequent and last years of his short life. He died in 1889 and was, in my view, the greatest poet the English language has produced since John Donne.

It is in the silhouettes of working people that I have felt the very force of our human destiny. bound as it is to labour. So that painting a picture of, let us say, a tired peasant, or a tired miner, became a quest to produce an image of acceptance of all tiredness of men who know that to survive they have to work.—Polish-born artist Josef Herman, who settled in Wales ten years ago, on BBC.

Voices of the Wild — Today — "At Home on the Ice." The purpose of this broadcast is to show the seal as one of the few animal inhabitants of Canada's Arctic, and to show its past and present role as a source of food for the Eskimos. Luce, born in China, educated first in America, then in Oxford, England, founded Time in 1923 and built it into the mighty organization it is today. A strong foe of communism, Luce recently told a senate committee that America must be prepared, if necessary, for "total war," that "peaceful co-existence is impossible between the Communists and the Free World" (though he later qualified this somewhat), and that beating communism in itself is not enough: "You can't beat something with nothing . . . our national purpose must be to promote, by every honest means, the establishment of constitutional governments . . . and by advancing the rule of law in international affairs."

Dr. Tom Dooley, interviewed by Pierre Berton, describes some of his experiences as an American doctor in the Far East.

BEST IN MUSIC

from Handel's Water Music, arranged by Hamilton Harty; and Concertante Musik, opus 10, by contemporary German composer Boris Blacher. It will be joined by the choir for three selections from Folk Songs of the Four Seasons, one of Vaughan Williams' lesser-known works.

In the December 4 program host Louis Applebaum will also conduct the orchestra, and guests will include Teresa Stratas, the young Canadian soprano who made a whirlwind rise to fame last year and now sings with the Metropolitan Opera Company; and Erica Goodman, 12-year-old harpist and daughter of Hyman Goodman, first violinist and concertmaster of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Miss Goodman will play an excerpt from Canadian composer Harry Somers' Suite for Harp and Orchestra. The January 22 program will feature Donald Bell, young bass-baritone who is returning to Canada from the Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, where he has been getting rave reviews. Other guests will be announced later.

Louis Applebaum is greatly enthusiastic about this series which, he thinks, is "one of the most significant things that has ever happened in music and television in Canada." He hastens to point out that it is "definitely NOT educational, NOT preachy. We won't play down to our young audience. In fact, we'll be dishing up a lot of new works for them, concentrating on modern music, because we feel we can communicate more directly to teenagers through it than through the 17th and 18th-century music in the usual concert repertoire. Of course everybody can enjoy these programs—they're not just for young people. They'll offer fun and sparkle—a pleasurable experience for both performers and audience, we hope. A few off-beat surprises, too. There's a strong possibility that we'll be doing Gerald McBoing Boing by Gail Kubik, who wrote the music for the original movie cartoon and then made a concert suite out of it for narrator and orchestra."
